

Amsterdam Institute of Finance (AIF) is a self-supporting, not-for-profit foundation, specialized in providing high-level financial training for executives. AIF's status as an independent institution enables faculty to be selected from internationally renowned business schools such as INSEAD, IMD, Harvard, Wharton and NYU. Participants in AIF courses have the advantage of learning from the world's leading experts who have significant teaching as well as consulting experience. Established in 1990 as an initiative of the Dutch financial community, AIF has built a strong presence worldwide for its open enrollment programs as well as its custom-made, in-company programs. Since its inception, AIF has trained professionals in more than 1000 organizations in over 100 countries, and has offered its programs to many clients from the Middle East.

AIF and New York University Stern School of Business (NYU Stern) are partnering to launch the Executive Master of Science in Risk Management, an innovative, global executive degree program in risk management. NYU Stern's Finance Department has been ranked #1 by the Chronicle of Higher Education in its 2007 Faculty Scholarly Productivity Index, and also as the #1 Finance Department by the Financial Times in 2008.

In addition to partnering with NYU Stern, AIF is also allied with CFA Institute. CFA Institute is the premier global certifying body for financial professionals. In 2009 AIF will hold programs in partnership with CFA Institute in Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Johannesburg, London, Riyadh, Shanghai and Singapore.
